The Genotype CM system is unable to identify certain mycobacterial species. The authors suggest that when choosing an empiric therapy for mycobacteria, it is important to reflect on the methodology presently used to identify mycobacteria and whether balance it represents the best approach.